Editorial Note/Description of Journal

Channels is the first international peer-reviewed journal to focus exclusively on all aspects of ion channel and ion transporter/exchanger function. Channels publishes articles focused on all aspects of ion channel and ion transporter/exchanger function. This includes papers centered around the biophysics, structure, molecular biology, structurefunction analysis, and regulation of channels and ion transport proteins, as well as their roles in health and disease.

We also encourage submission of manuscripts concerned with physiological aspects that branch into areas such as neuroscience and cardiovascular sciences, provided that channels and/or transporters are the main focus of such studies. There are no limitations on technical and experimental approaches that will be considered.

The key criteria for publication in Channels are originality, scientific merit and technical competence. Categories of manuscripts include original articles, brief communications, new methodologies, reviews & perspectives, and meeting reports.

All manuscripts are sent for in depth peer review, however, the editorial board will consider reviewer reports from submissions to leading journals such as Nature, Science and Cell for accelerated review. Our goal is to evolve Channels into the leading journal in the channel and transporter fields.

The goal is to foster communication and rapid exchange of information through timely publication of important results using traditional as well as electronic formats.
